On 30-31 May 2016, Russian International Affairs Council (RIAC) holds the Second International Conference “Russia and China: Taking on a New Quality of Bilateral Relations” reopening fruitful dialogue which started last year. The conference will give rise to the analysis of the current state and dynamics of Russia-China relations and will provide an opportunity to identify its main achievements and vulnerabilities. Proposals for the decision-makers of the two countries aimed at strengthening strategic partnership will be developed as a result of the event. High officials, diplomats, public figures, leading experts on different areas of bilateral relations, representatives of business and media from Russia and China are invited to take part in the conference.

The alignment of the Eurasian Economic Union (EEU) and the Silk Road Economic Belt (SREB) will receive particular attention. Connecting the two strategic initiatives provides optimal conditions for a new economic and political environment in Eurasia both for Russia and China as well as for the countries of the European Union, the Middle East and

The Executive Office of the Government of Russia, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Russia and the Embassy of People's Republic of China in the Russian Federation confirmed support for the event. The conference is held together with the Russian-Chinese Committee of Friendship, Peace and Development, RAS Institute of Far Eastern Studies, CREON Energy, as well as several Russian and Chinese think tanks and non-governmental organizations.

the South Caucasus region. Along with the infrastructure initiatives, Russia and China are actively engaged in building new instruments in the framework of the SCO, BRICS and other multilateral institutions. However, imbalances in the global economic system and Russia's and China's recent economic troubles pose serious threats to the implementation of large-scale development projects, influence the quality and the level of Russian-Chinese economic ties and demand innovational approaches to the collaboration.

At the same time, there is a significant potential for development in education, culture, science and technology cooperation. Russian-Chinese relations in those fields and cooperation between the two civil societies still fall behind our countries' capabilities. This lag slows down cooperation in other areas. International Conference “Russia and China: Taking on a New Quality of Bilateral Relations” is aimed at intensifying broad civil dialogue and searching for brand new, more effective mechanisms and formats of Russia-China collaboration.

The general partners of the conference are JSC Transneft and PJSC Rosseti.

Russian International Affairs Council expresses gratitude to the PJSC LUKOIL and the International Foundation of Technology and Investment for the financial support of the event.
